9 April 1991

Dear Colleague:

I am pleased to enclose a brochure entitled A Guide to the Research and Evaluation Program of the Royal Commission on New Reproductive Technologies. This overview is intended to encourage a wider understanding of the Commission's research work and priorities.

I would like to take this opportunity to inform you that the federal government has extended the mandate of the Commission for an additional year beyond October 1991. The Commission requested the extension to its mandate because the complexity of the issues it is examining requires an extensive program of comprehensive and rigorous research.

There are also a number of areas in which further consultations are required in order for the Commission's final report to accurately reflect the values and beliefs of Canadians. In the additional year that has been given to the Commission to consider the difficult questions posed by new reproductive technologies, we will continue to seek the views and opinions of people from all sectors of Canadian society.

While the Commission would like to receive information as soon as possible, all material received up until April 30, 1992 will be included in its deliberations. Those who have already made submissions to the Commission now have the opportunity to send additional information.

If you would like further information, contact the Commission at (613) 954-9999, or toll-free at 1-800-668-7060.

Sincerely,

Patricia Baird.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY MINORITY FACULTY FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

The program is designed to increase the number of Hispanic, Black American, and Native American faculty on the Bloomington campus.

They are currently searching for potential candidates from a wide variety of disciplines to teach during the 1992 second (eight week) summer session and the 1992-93 academic year. A central goal of the Fellowship Program is to assist chairpersons and deans in identifying minority scholars who might be available for longer-term positions.

The fellowship package includes a salary equivalent to that ordinarily paid to an Indiana University faculty member of the same rank plus a $3,000 stipend.

Individuals nearing completion of the doctorate and those who have completed the Ph.D. within the last four years are now being considered. They must have demonstrated a strong commitment to scholarly research and creative teaching.

Should you know of anyone whom you would like to recommend for the program, Indiana University will be happy to receive their name and address so that they may write to them directly inviting them to apply to the program.

Deadline for application is September 30, 1991.

Write to: Dr. Carolyn Calloway-Thomas, Director
Minority Faculty Fellowship Program
809 East Seventh Street
Indiana University
Bloomington, Indiana 47405 U.S.A.

Thank you for your cooperation.
